A Trip from Alexandria to the Coast.
DONAPARTE RIVER, B. C.
July 21, 1861.

EDITOR BRITISH COLONIST.—Allow me to furnish you with the following brief account of an exploring trip from Alexandria to the North Bentinck Arm, by a party of which I was one. The party consisting of Messrs. Ronald, McDonald, Gilbert, Tomkins, J. B. Pearson, R. P. Ritchie, and myself, started from Alexandria to the sea coast, for the purpose of exploring a new and shorter route into the upper districts of British Columbia than was at present known or traveled.

With this view, after obtaining all possible information, we left Alexandria on the 24th of May last with five riding and four pack animals.

After the loss of several days from accidental causes, we arrived at Lake Anawhim, supposed to be McKenzie's Lake, Naon count down on the 8th day of June. Here we obtained a guide and started from the coast on the 10th. On the 12th we camped in the valley of the Atanah or Bili-koolah River and camped a few miles further down. Here the horses were left in charge of Messrs. Pearson and Ritchie. The rest of the party started on foot in the evening of the 17th, and arrived at the Ballakoolah village, Nonticlaoff, early on the morning of the 19th. Here, after a delay of two days, we obtained a canoe and descended to Kongotis, the head of the Ballakoolah Inlet or North Bentinck Arm in six hours. The cause of the horses being left was partially the desertion of our guide, but more particularly the swollen state of the streams or rather mountain torrents running into the Ballakoolah River. These streams are narrow and shallow, but at high water the bed being filled with boulders and the water rushing over them both with great velocity the crossing becomes dangerous. The bridging of them would however be a mere trifle. We were received with the greatest hospitality by the Ballakoolah Indians and were lodged at the different villages on salmon and outchuck on done up in every imaginable variety. The Indians here are also much more willing to give information than either the Chilcotin or Anawhim tribes. The village of Kongotis would be the head of navigation for sea-going vessels. On the 24th, we left Kongotis to return in a canoe and arrived at Nonticlaoff on the 26th. From the rapidity of the current it took us two days to ascend the stream this distance, which we had descended in six hours. The trail between the two villages (the Indians informed us) was good. From Nonticlaoff we arrived in camp, where our horses were left, on the 28th, it taking us two days to accomplish a distance of one day. On traveled by Indians with packs on the Ballakoolah River and arrived in camp on the 10th, just, traveling moderately. The Ballakoolah River can, we consider, be made navigable for light draught steamers as far up as Nonticlaoff, and perhaps for some distance above. From this point, pack-trains could make Alexandria or the mouth of Quenele River in 14 or 15 days. The trail to Quenele River, if one were made there, would probably have to diverge from the Alexandria trail at Chesnut Lake, about 75 miles from Alexandria. The trail runs the whole distance from the Fraser to the coast range on an elevated table-land, and is situated in every direction with lakes and meadows. The feed for animals is good and plentiful. The streams are numerous, small and shallow, in fact, with one or two exceptions, being mere creeks. There are some swamps which would have to be forded, but the fallen timber is also an obstruction, but is light and could very easily be cleared. The trail might also be shortened in some places.

We had no difficulty whatever in making the distance from our camp on the Ballakoolah River to Alexandria in eleven days with pack horses. With the exception of a part of the descent of the Coast Range the trail is comparatively level. This descent, or rather slide, would be an obstruction to a wagon-road, but could be easily overcome. The swamps all have a good rocky foundation, which is covered in some places with moss and small bushes; but principally with long meadow grass. We had it no difficulty in getting through them with jacked animals. When the Coast Range is passed here is no perceptible ascent. The descent to the coast is also, with the exception of the slide, gradual. From the place where the trail first strikes the Ballakoolah River in the Coast Range, it runs along its banks through a deep gorge or pass in the mountains the whole way to the coast. It is right, however, here to mention that there is another road from Lake Anawhim, which strikes the river at Nonticlaoff, which the Indians said was the better road. They also informed us that if we had taken this trail we would have got our horses to Nonticlaoff easily, as we would thereby have avoided the worst part of the other road and the b-trents. This we had every reason to believe, the trail would have to be improved before pack-trains could conveniently travel over it; but it could easily be made a good practicable road for either pack-trains or wags. We all consider that if a road were made from the Ballakoolah Inlet (North Bentinck Arm) to strike the Fraser somewhere about the mouth of the Quenele River, and from thence into the Cariboo, a great saving in the cost of transportation would be effected. The trail if properly explored and surveyed this year could be made available for next season. Taking Ballakoolah Inlet as starting point, the Upper Fraser can be struck at almost any given point from the coast; and if that part of the country turns out to be as rich in gold as is expected, goods can be laid down quite as cheap if not cheaper at Fraser's Lake or Fort George than they can at present be obtained at Williams' Lake, 60 miles this side of the Forks of Quenele. Fraser's Lake is actually nearer the coast than Alexandria. Some of the coast Indians with whom we conversed had been to the Fraser River and they all described the trails to the northward of Alexandria as being good and level and running through a pretty fair kind of country. Some of these Indians are perfectly well acquainted with all the trails leading into the interior of the country as they make annual excursions to trade for furs with the inland tribes, making a handsome profit by reselling to the steamer Labouchere and traders on the coast. There would be little difficulty now in taking a train of horses lightly packed from the head of Ballakoolah Inlet to Alexandria. Trusting that these few remarks will have some effect in dispelling the delusive idea promulgated by those who ought to have known better that the country between the coast and the Fraser was perfectly barren and inaccessible and the route quite as impracticable.

I am sir, yours sincerely,
JOHN G. BARNSTON.

All sorts of Paragraphs.
A Paris letter states that in the course of the trials of artillery, in the harbor of L'Orient, a projectile was discovered which pierces the very best iron plating, a discovery, the writer adds, which, as it cannot be long kept secret, seems to have excited misgivings as to the efficiency of steel-clad frigates.

There is a girl of thirteen in B-fast, Me., who is able to manufacture a pair of boots as well as the workmen of the other sex. She was early thrown upon her own resources, and bravely learned the trade rather than be dependent.

Not a single member of the present Kansas Senate was born west of the Ohio River.

An Enfield rifle-ball makes two hundred revolutions per second after leaving the barrel.

The Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune, speaking against wasting the lives of our volunteers, says: "There are now, or soon will be, 300,000 of our men in the field. Worthless as many are to themselves, and to society, the question of their use and value is not for our determination. Each is a single human life, and our determination, and fills his place in the mechanism of society and the State." We should like to measure the comparative worthlessness of a Washington correspondent of the Tribune and the men of the volunteers! So says the New Hampshire Patriot.

Story of Garibaldi.
The following story of the liberator of Italy from a foreign correspondent is not bad:

Would you like an anecdote of Garibaldi? Ah, bravo! as the Milanese say, then I will tell you one; indeed, I recommend it to the notice of the world of artists as a new subject to supersede "Alfred in the Neatherd's Hut," in which the thoughtless monarch has been spoiling "cakes" for many generations of painters. Be it known, then, that Garibaldi, who like many other (though not all, witness Mark Antony,) great men gets up at most unseasonable hours, rose one morning with the lark long before the servants of the Marquis Trecci, with whom he was staying some weeks since, and proceeded to "take his walk abroad." Like many, but not all great men, Garibaldi is addicted to what some persons consider the pernicious habit of smoking cigars. Not having a light he applied to a laborer who was passing to know where there was a cottage. The laborer seeing a quiet-looking man, in rather rural garments, took him for a fellow peasant and offered to conduct him home. The hero of Varese accepted and seems to have enlightened the rustic mind of his companion with his views on the cultivation of corn and the protection of vines. Arrived at the cottage, Garibaldi sat down, and breaking his cigar in half as he always does, proceeded to smoke one half and to play with his no's children. He was just in the act of riding one of them to "Banbury Cross" or whatever place is the chosen ride of Italian childhood, when the blacksmith of the village, a man who had seen the world, entered the cottage and exclaimed: "Body of St. John of Sala, General Garibaldi!"

Who shall describe the scene, the excited females, the timid children and the astonished father? They fell on their great hero and hugged him, kissed him and blessed him, till he effected his retreat. He left behind him the other half cigar, which was at once made a "relic" and now lies hidden in the family treasury with the family plate (pillions, i. e. silver hair-pins) and other valuables. Many pilgrims have visited the shrine and their admiring eyes, the good peasant produces his treasure. The Syndic of Sala sent a calf, valued at many Napoleons, and offered it in exchange for the unit tobacco of Garibaldi, but the possessor refused that golden calf and retains the cigar as an heir-looin.

JOHN BELL.

A Washington correspondent gives a sad picture of the condition of Lieut. Bartlett, late of the Naval Brigade. He is there, among the crowd, but looks wretched and utterly abandoned of hope. There is no trace of the "diamond wedding" in his frown and dejected exterior. He is poverty itself, and misery itself, hooted at on all corners, cursed in all companies, and wandering lonely through the crowds, with none so poor as even to acknowledge his acquaintance.

A CHARMING "NOTICE."—There is great delicacy in the style of French obituaries. Thus runs one of a fashionable lady, known to high circles in Paris:
A loss sadly and unhappily anticipated for the 4 months past affl icts profoundly an honorable family, not less esteemed in French than Spanish society. The charming Señora Angela de Ochoa y Madrazo has yielded to the burns by which she had received cruel injuries in the midst of the pleasures of a ball.

At Girvan, Scotland, the following announcement was made by the town crier, at the very pitch of his stentorian lungs:—
"All persons keeping cocks or hens in this street to the annoyance of their neighbor's gardens, will be destroyed after this intimation."

THE COTTON SUPPLY QUESTION.—This is a point of vital interest to British manufacturers, and must necessarily again and again come up for discussion. The Morning Post—Palmerstonian—in a recent article, points out how cotton may be brought from the South through Mexico, whose ports the U. S. Government cannot decently blockade without getting up a feasible quarrel. This mode of obtaining the staple would, of course greatly enhance the price of it, but in commerce and trade this enhancement is of less moment than is generally supposed, so that the worse evil of a stoppage is avoided. The writer points out how, during the war with Russia, our manufacturers were distressed by the stoppage of Russian supplies, owing to our strict blockade, and how supply met demand by the produce being carried overland into Persia, whence it was shipped in neutral bottoms to Britain.

FEARS FOR THE POPE.—So imminent was the danger in which his Holiness the Pope was at last accounts, that the telegraph was hourly expected to announce his death. The Holy Father has been long declining, but an abscess in his leg, infecting his whole body, causes the greatest fears for his safety at this juncture.

DRUGS & MEDICINES.

THE WORLD'S FRIEND!

A Cure for Piles and Fistulas.
Inflammation of sensitive parts, piles, fistulas, and such like painful diseases may be presently relieved and ultimately cured, by the proper and diligent use of this cooling and healing Ointment, whose action is so mild, that it may be used by the most delicate. In many cases there have elapsed the most tedious treatment, ere many days have elapsed the patient will experience a wonderful degree of ease from this treatment. They are equally suitable to both sexes, and all ages.

Cou, hie, Colds, and Asthma.
These complaints of the chest come on with alarming frequency. The Ointment should assiduously be rubbed twice or three times a day on the upper part of the shoulders, when the violence of all symptoms will gradually give way, the breathing become longer and the oppression less. No medicines are more effectual in these complaints, none can be used with such certainty, and with so little inconvenience.

Gout and Rheumatism. Inveterate?
The essence of these diseases lie in the blood, which floats through each vessel, the drogs, which irritates and inflames every tissue in contact with it, and produces the hot, swollen, and painful enlargement of the glands, and the various accompanying diseases. The philosophy of these characteristically governing this depravity in the skin consists in the fact that, although by the use of the Pills, The Ointment, and the Pills, applied upon the skin, penetrates through it, and is in union, with the blood, and soon effects a cure.

PROPSY, SWOLLEN LEGS, or Ankles.
The various kinds of drops, &c. whether they are, or arise from some obstruction to the free circulation of the blood, or on though the blood vessel or lymphatics, or on the inflamed site of some secreting surface, or on the skin, or on the mucous membrane, or on the effluvia, the efficacy cannot be ascertained, as they are absorbed, and act directly upon the system, and not upon the parts, and secretions, with a power that no drops can exert, and which, if they are given in large quantities, can long resist. They require a proper flow of blood to every organ, and purify curious,—they thoroughly regenerate every function, yet potent as they are for good, they are powerful for evil. They do not contain mercury or anyxious substances. They act safely and certainly.

Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, and Old Uterus.

This invaluable Ointment was never known to fail in the cure of any wound, any sore, or any ulcer.—It can be moved by fumigation, and Persons who had been discharged from Hospitals as incurable, and yet by perseverance they have been cured, is sound as they were the day they were born, this incomparable Ointment. For pimples, blotches, and heads, and scroftic humours, It is equally efficacious.

With the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases:

Legs. 1 Chloride of Potash. 10 Grains.
